MEMORANDUM

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This litigation arises out of a dispute between Plaintiffs and the United States Government over ten 1933 Double Eagle $20 gold coins. In August 2004, Plaintiffs Roy, Joan, and David Langbord, acting through their counsel Barry Berke (“Berke”), contacted the Chief Counsel for the United States Mint, Daniel Shaver (“Shaver”), and the Senior Legal Counsel for the United States Mint, Greg Weinman (“Weinman”), to inform them that they had discovered the Double Eagles in a family safety deposit box in Philadelphia. Plaintiffs assert that the coins

The Strange Case of the 1933 Double Eagles

In March 1933, as one of the many measures designed to reverse the Great Depression, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt issued a Proclamation prohibiting payment of gold coin. This resulted in the melting of 445,500 1933-dated, but never issued $20 Double Eagle gold coins previously struck at the Philadelphia Mint. The only specimens to leave the Mint lawfully were two 1933 Double Eagles given to the Smithsonian Institution in 1934 for preservation in the National Numismatics collection.

May of 2018 is the 85th anniversary of President Roosevelt’s gold call.

Plaintiffs assert that the coins had belonged to their late family member, Israel Switt ("Switt"), and passed to Plaintiffs

After a 1933 Double Eagle appeared at auction in 1944, a Secret Service investigation led to the recovery of nine stolen pieces that also were subsequently melted. A tenth piece was recovered in 1996, with that case ending in a unique settlement under which that single coin was monetized and issued by the United States Mint and sold at auction in 2002 for $7.6 million. Ten more specimens surfaced in 2004, this time in the possession of the family of the Philadelphia Jeweler who had facilitated the distribution of the stolen Double Eagles in the 1930s. Litigation ensued.

Mint Senior Legal Counsel Greg Weinman will discuss and answer questions about the extraordinary and intriguing case of the 1933 Double Eagles, the history, the litigation, and the Mint plans for the preservation and display of these historic national treasures.

WILL BE ON SITE

Dealer Page The PAN Spring Bourse floor is sold out. We have a waiting list. Call our bourse chairman Blaine Shiff at 412-531-4100 to be placed on it. We had one cancellation and were able to place a waiting dealer.

Set-up days are Wednesday May 9th at 3:00pm to 7:00pm. Set-up continues on Thursday from 8:00am to 12:00 noon when the floor opens to the public. We will have our 5:00pm snack and beverage table. It is not an all you can eat buffet and is limited. We offer this as a little something to hold you over until you can get dinner. Many dealers travel a great distance and a quick bite after a long journey is appreciated.

We have a number of first time PAN dealers participating this time. We welcome them and are making every effort to make check in and set up smooth and easy.

The Monroeville Convention Center concession stand will not offer the free refill coffee deal as in the past. They have increased their selection of menu items.

There are no scheduled events in the adjoining hall. Access and parking should be good. Please unload and move your vehicle quickly from the dock area. Everyone wants to get in and get set up smoothly and quickly and it is a common courtesy to not let your car sit on the dock for an unreasonable length of time.

PAN requires dealers and table helpers to be members of PAN. Table helpers can join for the small amount of $5. We are questioned periodically about this requirement and we offer this explanation.

We understand that this issue seems petty and that the $5 associate dues can be considered just another annoyance and a tactic to fill the PAN coffers.

The answer is through the course of hosting PAN coin shows since the early 1980's; all sorts of problems or situations have come up over these many years. Occasionally a dispute between a buyer and seller occurs. Sometimes the dispute escalates to the point of requiring security to remove a person from the show floor. The person asked to leave objects on the basis of his membership in PAN. We have heard the argument that a said dealer or helper is not a PAN member and should be removed instead. It is our policy to have every dealer and helper as part of our membership. You, as a dealer, are now invested and partnered with what PAN does. You are part of the organization that is providing the venue and as such, are in a better position when we have to mediate a dispute. Granted it is rare but it has happened. Thanks for your understanding.

Unforeseen issues that will affect the PAN Fall Coin Show concerns the Whitman Baltimore show. Both shows fall on the same date, October 25 – 27, 2018. PAN has tried to move to another October/November weekend. The Monroeville Convention Center has nothing available for the five days needed to put on our coin show. The PAN Board has decided to stay with our scheduled date. PAN publishes its show dates five years in advance. We will likely lose some dealers. The good news is that we anticipate no significant drop in attendance. Those dealers that do attend the PAN show will benefit from the usual public participation. We have additional plans to make our fall event more attractive and are confident in having another great show.

Charles I

ANCIENT AND MEDIÆVAL COINAGE

by E. Tomlinson Fort

Nicholas Briot and the Image of Charles I at the Edinburgh Mint
The Royal Academy of Art in London is presently holding a major exhibition of the works of art from the collection of Charles I, king of Scotland, England and Ireland from 1625 until his execution in 1649. While the consensus among historians is that Charles was a poor politician who led his kingdoms into a civil war, which eventually destroyed both his regime and himself; among art historians and connoisseurs he is considered to have amassed the finest art collection of any ruler in European history.

After the king's execution in 1649 the entire collection was sold off by the new republican government in an attempt to pay some of their massive debts. Sadly for the parliamentarians, this sudden dump of art treasures onto the European market meant that they received only a small fraction of the art works true value. After the restoration of the monarchy in 1660 Charles II and his successors made every attempt to buy back as much as possible from the late king's collection but many masterpieces were destined to remain abroad. The Royal Academy has now brought back most King Charles' collection together for the first time since his death. The exhibition will be running in London until 15 April. For more information visit their web site: <https://www.royalacademy.org.uk>

Charles' interest in art also extended to the coins and medals produced during his reign. He is known to have visited the Royal mint in the Tower of London on at least two occasions. The king was careful about how he was portrayed on all numismatic objects. His favourite engraver was the Nicholas Briot (c.1579-1646) who had begun his career as a medalist in France where he also developed a mechanised means of producing coins.

In 1625 Briot emigrated to England. In London, his work, and machine(s) impressed King Charles. From that date he produced a series of medals commemorating the king and his activities. Briot was appointed chief engraver at the London mint in 1633. His ideas of using new technology to produce coinage did not make him popular at the mint since many employees feared that the new mechanical means of coining would cost jobs.

In 1635 King Charles selected Briot to be the new master of the mint in Edinburgh. He was not welcomed into Scotland. Many of Scots were not happy with the idea of a foreigner taking over the mint's administration and engraving duties. Likewise, the Scottish mint employees had the same fears of the new technology as their counterparts in London. Nevertheless, from 1635 to 1637 Briot began a major reform of the Scottish coinage that reintroduced and improved the quality of a number of denominations in gold and silver. The Scottish coinage must have pleased King Charles since in 1637 Briot was summoned back to London and placed in charge of the mint at London. A much more lucrative job.

Meanwhile, in Scotland, Briot was succeeded as mint master by his son in law John Falconer. Charles' Scottish monetary reform never had time to succeed since years of poor political decisions coupled with an attempt to impose a new prayer book on the Scots in 1637, lead to a series of riots and rebellions throughout the kingdom. This Scottish revolt was the beginning of the civil wars that would lead to his destruction.

The coin pictured here is a silver 12 shilling piece struck at the Edinburgh mint under Briot. A Classic Numismatic Group auction catalogue once described this denomination as having 'arguably the finest portrait of Charles I on a circulation coin.' The obverse reads: CAR · D · G · MAG · BRIT · FRAN · ET · HIB · REX ('Charles, by the grace of God, king of Great Britain, France and Ireland') with a crowned bust of the king facing left and the number XII behind. Note the sideways letter B at the end of the inscription where Briot signs his die. The reverse legend states: QVÆ · DEVS · CONIVNXIT · NEMO · SEPARET ('What God brings together let no one separate') around a crowned coat of arms, with the crowned letters C and R ( for Carolus Rex or 'King Charles') across the field.

In view of King Charles appreciation of Briot and his work, it would seem likely that he would have enjoyed the bust on this piece.
